Animals appear to be dis-posed to seek the cool shade of a tree when the heat is oppressive, and it is ernel, to say the least, to deprive them of this comfort. We have always noticed that animals having a comfortable resting place during the hottest part of the day would feed later at night as well as commence earlier in the morning; consequently, we fail to see wherein shade trees in a pasture are detrimental to good licalth or the fittening of animals, as is cometimes asserted. There are certainly two sides to this question, but the more liumane practice would be to provide shade, to say nothing of appearances.

GIVING UILLORAL TO HORSES,-Coachnen in Burdeaux, France, have for some time past been in the habit of giving horses in their charge chloral, so as to make them easier to ride ar drive. The drug acted like a charm, for horses which had previously been so spirited as to give much trouble to their drivers became as quiet as lambs after a few days of this treatment. This great change naturally attracted the attention of the of chloral every morning, to make them go quietly; and further, that many of the traternity in Bordeaux followed the same plan. This is not only true of coachmen in Bordeaux, but is asserted to be practised by American coachinen
